Mr. Gilioli is a partner in the International Corporate group. He concentrates on infrastructure projects, cross-border mergers and acquisitions, corporate reorganizations, and commercial contracts.

Mr. Gilioli has worked on major infrastructure projects in a variety of countries, including in the former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. For nearly ten years, he has been representing the interests of the Republic of Kazakhstan in multi-billion dollar transactional and contentious matters relating to the giant Kashagan and Karachaganak oil and gas fields.

Among other transactions, he led the Curtis team that helped renegotiate the production sharing agreement relating to the Karachaganak oil field and the transfer of a 10% share in the project to the national oil company of Kazakhstan. He also represented the national oil company of Kazakhstan in the renegotiation of the production sharing agreement relating to the Kashagan oil field, as well as the sale of a 49% interest in the "N" Block exploration and production contract to two international oil companies. Mr. Gilioli has worked on transactions relating to the transportation of oil and gas in Central Asia. He also has worked on a number of infrastructure projects in Kosovo, including the reorganization of the national post and telecommunications provider, and on oil and gas transactions in several countries, including Afghanistan, Ghana, Gabon, Liberia and Mexico.
